Enrichment is a practice of modifying an environment to enable an animal to display normal behaviors, which improves the well-being of that animal. Enrichment helps to keep animals both physically and mentally stimulated and can be created using common household items.

Foraging & Puzzle Solving

Enrichment that promotes foraging, grazing, or puzzle solving behaviors includes:

- Pet-safe plants such as grass (turtles, rabbits)
- Paper tube or cardboard puzzles (rabbits, rodents, birds)
- Hay bins (rabbits, rodents)

Exercise

Enrichment that promotes movement and exercise includes:

- Shredding toys (birds)
- Tubes or tunnels to explore (rodents, ferrets, snakes)
- Dig boxes (rabbits)
- Vertical hanging toys (rodents, sugar gliders)
- Exercise wheels (rodents, hermit crabs)

Security

Enrichment that can allow animals to feel safe includes:

- Hide boxes (chinchillas, guinea pigs, hedgehogs)
- Caves (fish)
- Tubes or tunnels to explore (rodents, ferrets, snakes)

Sensory

Enrichment that promotes utilizing senses include:

- Visual - touchscreen devices, television (reptiles)
- Auditory - singing, talking, radio playing (birds, amphibians)
- Olfactory (scent) - food items, old t-shirts (small mammals, snakes)
- Tactile - substrates of different textures (small mammals, amphibians)
